On or about 18 July 1948 the China Vegetable Oil Corporation, a semi-government monopoly, notified various exporters of tung oil and other vegetable oil products connected with the corporation to move their stocks immediately from Chungking, Ichang (111-17,30-42), Hankow and other upriver Yangtze ports, to Shanghai. The notification stated that the corporation feels that the National Government can no longer be assured of control of the river.
